ABSTRACT

Learning English nowadays is very important and necessary, since it is the international language of communication. As it is stated in the book teaching English as foreign language “Of the 4,000 to 5,000 living languages, English is by far the most widely used.” (Brumfit, 2003) Consequently, as soon as possible to start acquiring the knowledge the better.

This project presents a Booklet of Basic English for kindergarten students with a didactic material kit to be used with it, by means of this booklet the students have the chance to acquire basic vocabulary in the English language.

This product includes didactic material kits like flashcards, worksheets, a series of videos and songs and unit evaluations. As an additional contribution, teachers attended two workshop sessions to learn how to use the resources provided.

The implementation of this project is the starting point to achieve significant impact in the teaching of English at Escuela Oficial de Párvulos No.5, República de Haití, Guatemala City, Guatemala.

Key words: teaching, booklet, English, impact, didactic material kit.

INTRODUCTION

The Booklet of Basic English for students for kindergarten level and a didactic material kit for teachers at Escuela Oficial de Párvulos No.5, República de Haití, Guatemala City, Guatemala was designed due to the inexistence of an English class on CNB.

Therefore, the general objective of this project is to design a Booklet of Basic English for students from kindergarten level and a didactic material kit for teachers at Escuela Oficial de Párvulos No.5, República de Haití, Guatemala City, Guatemala to be able to teach English class.

Five specific objectives were established to implement the project, the first one is to design a booklet of Basic English and a didactic material kit with lesson plans, worksheets to be used by Spanish teachers and students for kindergarten level. The second one is to design the lesson plans that will be implemented during the school year. The third one is to provide the didactic material kit needed to develop the English class. The fourth one is to provide a series of videos and songs related to the topics. The last one is to develop two workshop sessions for Spanish teachers from kindergarten level with instructions and guidelines that allow them to use the booklet and audiovisual material.

The product of the project has five goals, the first goal is to provide two four unit-booklets of Basic English for Spanish teachers who will develop the English class. The second one is to provide two sets of thirty-six lesson plans designed according to the contents in both languages Spanish and English. The next goal is to provide eighty-three printable flashcards and fifty-seven printable worksheets including handcrafts and unit evaluations. The fourth goal is to provide a USB flash drive which contains a series of videos and songs related to the topics. The last one is to develop two workshop sessions.

This report is a compilation of the phases completed during the development of the PSP project; it consists of five chapters which are described below:

Chapter I: The diagnosis contains information of the beneficiary institution and describes the process of diagnosis in order to identify its lacks and determine the problems with their suggested solutions. Instruments as observation, interviews and surveys were used. Viability and feasibility of the suggested solutions were also analyzed to get the approval for the project.

Chapter II: The theoretical framework is created by topics related to the teaching of English as a foreign language and concepts related to the project.

Chapter III: The project profile describes general aspects of the project like the type of project, justification, general and specific objectives, goals, budget and planned activities with the purpose of implementing the solutions to the problem found in the diagnosis.

Chapter IV: The project implementation applies the activities stated in the previous chapter. This is one of the most important chapters since this is the elaborated product of the project. This product was designed by using documentary research, dosage of the contents and elaboration of lesson plans and its activities according to the age of the students. This chapter includes a reduced copy of the booklet of Basic English for students from kindergarten level and a didactic material kit.

Chapter V: The evaluation establishes how the achievements of each phase of the project are evaluated.

The conclusions are based on the general and specific objectives of the project, and recommendations are included to optimize the use of the booklet.

A list of references is also shown about the sources consulted during the development of this project.

In the appendix is included documents elaborated by the PSP student such as, planning of chapters and continuity plan, the instruments used for the elaboration of the diagnosis, evaluation checklist for each phase of the project are also included on it.

Finally, the annexes presented official documents supporting the implementation of the project, and pictures.

1.8 Problem Selected

According to the prioritization of the problem; it was noticed that one of the most relevant lacks that could be solved in Escuela Oficial de Párvulos No.5 República de Haití, Guatemala City, Guatemala was the absence of a booklet for English field. Therefore, the problem selected was the curricular inefficiency.

1.9 Viable and feasible solution

After the analysis was performed to determine what was the most viable and feasible solution. The creation of a booklet for English field was selected. The analysis was done after considering the viability and feasibility in financing, legal, technical, marketing, cultural, social and economic areas.

CHAPTER II

THEORETICAL FRAMEWORK

2.1 Education

2.1.1 Definition

According to Cambridge dictionary education is “the process of teaching and learning in a school or collage”. (Cambridge Learner’s Dictionary Third Edition, 2007) Education is also known as the study of methods and theories of teaching and learning.

2.2 Multiple intelligences

Since every individual has developed different skills, different methods and techniques must be used in order to teach any subject.

The theory of multiple intelligences was developed by Dr. Howard Gardner in 1983 at Harvard University. According to Dr. Howard Gardner says that, “the traditional notion of intelligence, based on IQ testing, is far too limited” (Linsley, 2012) Dr. Howard Gardner created different methods of teaching because each person possesses different kinds of minds, therefore learn, remember, perform, and understand in different ways. He identified 8 different intelligences in order to measure the range of human potential in children and adults.

These different intelligences are the following:

- Logical-mathematical intelligence
- Visual-Spatial intelligence
- Bodily-kinesthetic intelligence
- Musical intelligence
- Linguistic intelligence
- Interpersonal intelligence
- Naturalist intelligence
- Intrapersonal intelligence

2.2.1 Logical-Mathematical intelligence

It describes the ability to develop equations, calculate, quantify and to solve abstract problems like numbers and symbols like Thomas Armstrong says, that “It is the understanding and use of logical structures” (Armstrong, 2017).

Children with logical-mathematical intelligence feel comfortable by solving math problems, puzzles. They are organized and they like working with computers.

2.2.2 Visual-Spatial intelligence:

According to Thomas Armstrong visual-spatial intelligence is “the ability to perceive the visual world accurately, to perform transformations upon one’s initial perceptions.” (Armstrong, 2017). In other words, it describes the ability to visualize something in your mind. Children with visual-spatial intelligence like to draw, do jigsaw puzzles and multimedia.

2.2.3 Bodily-kinesthetic intelligence

According to Thomas Armstrong this intelligence includes “specific physical skills such as coordination, balance, dexterity, strength, flexibility and speed”. (Armstrong, 2017, pág. 25) . It means that children communicate well through body language and be taught through physical activities, hands-on learning. Tools included equipment and real objects.

2.2.4 Musical intelligence

According to Thomas Armstrong “It is the capacity to perceived and transform and discriminate among musical forms.” (Armstrong, 2017, pág. 25). This intelligence shows sensitivity to rhythm and sound. Children may study better with music in the background and there is often an affective connection between music and emotions.

2.2.5 Linguistic intelligence

According to Thomas Armstrong “It is the capacity to use words effectively, whether oral or in writing. This intelligence includes the capacity to manipulate the syntax or structure of the language. (Armstrong, 2017, pág. 22). This intelligence allows to understand the order and meaning of the words and these learners like reading, playing Word games, making up poetry and stories.

2.2.6 Interpersonal intelligence

Thomas Armstrong describes this intelligence as: “the ability to perceive and distinguish among the moods, intentions, motivations, and feelings of other people.” (Armstrong, 2017, pág. 37). Children learn with interaction, they have many friends and the way they learn is through group activities, seminars and dialogues.

2.2.7 Naturalist intelligence

According to Thomas Armstrong: “Expertise in the recognition and classification of the numerous species -the flora and fauna – of an individual’s environment.” (Armstrong, 2017, pág. 38). This intelligence identifies and distinguishes among different types of plants, animals and weather formations found in the natural world.

2.2.8 Intrapersonal intelligence

Thomas Armstrong describes this intelligence as: “Self-knowledge and the ability to act adaptively on the basis of that knowledge“ (Armstrong, 2017, pág. 28). It means understanding one’s own interest, goals. Children tend to shy away from others but they have wisdom, intuition and motivation. They can be taught through independent study and introspection.

2.3 Methods

According to Harmer, J. says that, “teaching practice is the direct result of such argument and discussion and not only on the subject of acquisition and learning” (Harmer, How to teach english new edition, 2007). In other words; a method is a procedure or way to achieve the objective of the lesson in class.

2.3.1 Total Physical Response (TPR)

It was developed by James Asher, TPR is a language learning method based on the coordination of language and physical movement. It means that the teacher gives commands to students and they respond with body movements.

2.3.2 Grammar translation

According to Jeremy Harmer this introduced that idea of presenting students with short grammar rules and word lists, and then translation exercises in which they had to make use of the same rules and words (Harmer, 2007, pág. 48). In other words, this method analyzes and studies the grammatical rules of the language.

2.3.3 Audio-lingualism

Jeremy Harmer says that audio-lingualism capitalized on the suggestion that if we describe the grammatical patterns of English, we can have students repeat and learn them (Harmer, 2007, pág. 49). In other words, this method emphasizes on learning grammatical and phonological structure, especially for speaking and listening.

2.3.4 Direct Approach

This means that the activity can be expository strategies, demonstrative, deductive and expository. In other words, this method in general focuses on the development of oral skills.

2.3.5 Inductive approach

It gives new knowledge to students, and it is a method of discovery. This method increases student motivation and participation.

2.3.6 Deductive approach

It does not give any new knowledge, and it is a method of verification. This method starts by giving students rules, then examples then practice. It is teacher-centered.

2.4 Teaching techniques

2.4.1 Mind mapping

According to Tony Buzan, mind mapping is “to draw an organization chart that collects information by using colors, shapes and drawing.” This is a technique that can be used in groups or individuals and teachers can use in order to represent ideas or concepts.

2.4.2 Brainstorming

According to Oxford dictionary brainstorming is “spontaneous group discussion to produce ideas”. (Oxford Dictionary of English , 2010) It describes a way of collecting ideas or information in a creative way.

2.4.3 Gamification

According to Karl M. Kapp, gamification is “To promote learning and engagement.” (Kapp, 2012). Learning through the use of games is a very useful technique because students learn without even realizing and keep students motivated. Teachers should design projects that are appropriate for their students, taking into account their age and knowledge, while making them attractive enough to provide extra motivation.

2.4.4 Social media

According to the Merriam-Webster dictionary, social media “forms of electronic communication through which users create online communities to share information, ideas, personal messages, and other content (such as videos).” (The Merriam-Webster dictionary , 1997) Social media is a very useful technique because teachers can share information, videos, pictures, etc. and since students are always connected to their social network, it is easier for them to be engaged in the subject presented.

2.5 Didactic Resources

According to the free dictionary, a didactic resource is “Something that is available for use or that can be used for support or help” (the free dictionary , 2016) in other words, didactic resources are any instruments that help us to achieve any goal.

2.5.1 Types of resources to use in Preschool

2.5.1.1 Posters

According to Collins English Dictionary poster is “a large notice or picture that is stuck on a wall or board” (Collins , 2016) in other words, a poster can be a large printed placard with a message on it.

2.5.1.2 Videos

An educational video is a teaching tool because it facilitates knowledge and students will be motivated because it can capture their attention. According to Collins English Dictionary it “is the system of recording films and events either digitally” (Collins , 2016).

2.5.1.3 Flashcards

It is a very useful tool for teachers because it is designed for gaining a rapid response form children, according to Collins English Dictionary it is “a card on which are written or printed words for children to look at briefly, used as an aid to learning” (UK, 2010).

2.5.1.4 Worksheets

According to the Longman Dictionary worksheet is “a piece of paper with questions and exercises for students” (Jack C. Richards, 2010) it is a very useful tool to work in the classroom with multiple exercises.

2.5.1.5 Games

It is very useful because students can learn through it. According to Collins English Dictionary it means “a game is an activity or sport usually involving skill, knowledge”. (UK, 2010).

2.5.1.6 Songs

Songs can be found in grammar, reading, writing, and listening as the main point of learning. According to Garner, Howard in the Theory of Multiple intelligences “The song is a learning space where students can explore the acoustic aspects, graphics, morph syntactic, semantic foreign language as all connotative and cultural potentialities which enroll in it”.

2.5.1.7 Booklets

Booklets also are used in the classroom in order to provide extra material to students. Stated in Collins English Dictionary it is “a small, thin book that has a paper cover and that gives information about something” (UK, 2010).

2.6 The teacher in the classroom

It is important the presence of the teacher in the classroom, according to Jeremy Harmer “the way we move and stand, and the degree to which we are physically demonstrative can have a clear effect on the management of the class”. (Harmer, How to teach english new edition, 2007, pág. 34). There are a number of issues to consider on the student’s perception.

2.6.1 Proximity

Some students are uncomfortable if teachers stand or sit close to them. Jeremy Harmer states that “teachers need to consider how close they should be to the students they are working with”. (Harmer, How to teach english new edition, 2007, pág. 34) Teachers should take into account when assessing their students’ reactions and should, modify their behaviors not too close but not too far from them.

2.6.2 Appropriacy

Deciding how close to the students you should be is a matter of appropriacy. According to Jeremy Harmer appropriacy is “the general way in which teachers sit or stand in classrooms” (Harmer, How to teach english new edition, 2007, pág. 35) it is important if a teacher wants to manage a class effectively, such a relationship is crucial.

2.6.3 Movement

Some teachers tend to spend most of their class time in one place, others spend the time walking from side to side in order to retain students’ interest. But Jeremy Harmer says “How much we move around in the classroom will depend on our personal style, where we feel most comfortable for the management of the class” (Harmer, How to teach english new edition, 2007, pág. 35).

2.6.4 Awareness

The teacher has to be aware of what students are doing and what they are feeling in order to manage a class successfully. In other words, watching and listening just as carefully as teaching. Jeremy Harmer says that awareness is “assessing what students have said and responding appropriately” (Harmer, How to teach english new edition, 2007, pág. 35). Teachers need to be conscious and flexible enough.

2.7 English as a Foreign Language (EFL)

According to Cambridge dictionary English as a Foreign Language is “English as taught to people whose main language is not English and who live in a country where English is not the official or main language.” (Cambridge Academic Content Dictionary, s.f.) This describes the study of English by non-native speakers in countries where English is not the dominant language.

The way that English is taught in a country plays a key role in determining what variety of English is spoken there. EFL countries are nations where the medium of instruction in education and government is not English but it is only a language that is taught in schools. There the language is used in an artificial context and mainly within the limits of classrooms.

“EFL is usually learned in environments where the language of the community and the school is not English. EFL teachers have the difficult task of finding access to and providing English models for their students” (Lee Gunderson, 2019, pág. 78).

2.8 Curriculum

Peter Oliva says that the curriculum is "a plan or program for all the experiences that the student is under the direction of the school. In practice, the curriculum consists of a number of plans, written and in depth, in the learning experiences". (William R. Gordon, 2013). The curriculum can therefore be a course, a unit, a series of courses, a complete program of a school or university and can influence inside or outside the classroom according to the teachers' guidelines.

2.8.1 Types of curriculums use in schools today

2.8.1.1 Written Curriculum

As defined by Salandanan (Salandanan, 2009, pág. 26) “It is usually confined to those written understandings and directions formally designated and reviewed by administrators, curriculum directors and teachers, often collectively”. It includes documents, course of study, or syllabi handed down to the schools, districts, divisions, departments for implementation.

2.8.1.2 Taught Curriculum

Gloria G. Salandanan stated “varied activities that are implemented in order to arrive at the objectives or purposes”. (Salandanan, 2009, pág. 30). It contains different planned activities which are put into action in the classroom and differs according to the learning styles of the students and the teaching styles of the teachers.

2.8.1.3 Hidden Curriculum

Longstreet and Shane refer to “the kinds of learnings children derive from the very nature and organizational design of the public school, as well as from the behaviors and attitudes of teachers and administrators”. (Shane, 1993). Hidden curriculum is not deliberately planned but may modify behavior or influence learning outcomes.

2.8.1.4 Supported Curriculum

According to Gloria G. Salandanan supported curriculum is “to achieve real and lifelong learning” (Salandanan, 2009, pág. 36) in other words, supported curriculum are all the materials which support or help in the implementation of the written curriculum.

2.8.1.5 Assessed curriculum

It is stated by Gloria that the assessed curriculum “A series of evaluations done by the teacher” (Salandanan, 2009, pág. 40) it is used to determine the progress of the students.

2.9 Teaching across age levels

Teaching English is more than knowing the language or even only to get together resources and techniques for teaching. Teaching English implies to be aware of the complexity of the multiplicity of contexts in which language is learned and taught.

For teaching English, teachers must take into consideration the variable of language proficiency, the sociopolitical context of teaching, the institution in which the teaching will take place and the purpose of learning English. Each of these considerations are the foundation to choose the selection of techniques, lesson plans and supporting materials for teaching English.

2.9.1 Teaching children

There are different needs that have to be considered when teaching language, age and the level that the learner is very important. “Popular tradition would have you believe that children are effortless second language learners and far superior to adults in their eventual success” (Brown, 2020, pág. 87). This is very true when it comes to children because of their pliable minds, they tend to pick up information quicker.

The main difference between children and adults, first “lies primarily in the contrast between child’s spontaneous, peripheral attention to language forms and the adult’s overt, focal awareness of and attention to those forms” (Brown, 2020, pág. 87). Children have to be told more often to sit down, to do their work, to concentrate and have a harder time focusing and sitting still in a classroom setting because their attention span is very short and unless they have a very creative lesson to capture their attention it often can be a lost cause for the teacher. On the other hand, Adults usually want to be in the classroom, and it is much easier to teach them.

As Jeremy Harper says in his book How to teach English “Almost all children acquire a language, apparently without effort. In many parts of the world, children grow up speaking two or more languages... Language acquisition seems to be almost guaranteed for children up to about the age of six. They seem to be able to learn languages with incredible facility.” (Harmer, How to teach English, 2007, pág. 46)

To teach children effectively a foreign language requires specific skills and intuitions. Five categories may help give some practical approaches to teaching children.

2.9.1.1 Intellectual Development

In the stage of learning a new language, children often do not immediately understand the grammatical rules and concepts, explanations and abstract terms, unless the teacher is explaining and describing in detail according to their age.

In the book Teaching by Principles: An Interactive Approach to Language Pedagogy, there is an example of a teacher and a student incident. The student is in need of a pencil and has asked the teacher for one: “Teacher, I ain’t got no pencil,” the teacher perturbed by his grammar, embarked on a barrage of corrective patterns: “I don’t have a pencil. You don’t have a pencil. We don’t have pencils.” The confused child responded. “Ain’t nobody got no pencils?” (Brown, 2020, pág. 102). In this situation aforementioned, the student did not understand what was the mistake. In his mind, he was just asking for a pencil, he did not understand the grammatical rule of asking for a pencil. When speaking about this situation, as a teacher, it is necessary to be careful in correcting the student. Since children are less capable in understanding abstract rules. They need to be taught in a way that makes sense to them since they need to understand why grammar is used in the way that it is.

2.9.1.2 Attention Span

One of the main differences between adults and children is attention span. Children are focused in the here and now, the activities and lessons in the classroom need to be designed to capture their immediate interest. “A teacher needs to be animated, lively, and enthusiastic about the subject matter. Consider the classroom a stage on which you are the lead actor; your energy will be infectious. While you may think that you're overdoing it, children need this exaggeration to keep spirit buoyed and minds alert. (Brown, 2020, pág. 103) Another thing that needs to be taken into consideration is that children have a natural curiosity, the lessons and activities must encourage their willingness to explore and learn by discovering new things.

2.9.1.3 Sensory Input

When it comes to learning, the teacher needs to stimulate all the five senses of the children. The lessons should include physical activities like play games, Total Physical Response activities, role-play activities, projects and other hands-on interaction to help stimulate the mind and get the blood flowing in the body.

Sensory aids are useful as well, being able to connect the information to something outside like a funny rhyme or songs are useful in helping students remember. Nonverbal language is very important since children are very sensitive to facial features, body language and gestures.

2.9.1.4 Affective Factors

Children are innovative in language forms but still have inhibitions since they are very sensitive and fragile. Teachers need to help them to overcome such potential barriers to learning, children need to be able to laugh at their mistakes. To be patient and supportive is the teachers' task as well as provoke as much oral participation as possible.

2.9.1.5 Authentic, Meaningful Language

“Children are focused on what this new language can actually be used for here and now. They are less willing to put up with language that doesn't hold immediate rewards for them.” (Brown, 2020, pág. 104) Using simple situations like telling stories, real life conversations, story lines can help children to contextualize the language. This can help in the process of learning since children's minds are less capable in understanding abstract rules, isolated and unconnected sentences. A whole language approach is essential. If language is broken into too many bits and pieces, children will not see the relationship to the whole.

2.10 Curriculum for the Pre-Primary Level

2.10.1 Characterization of the level

The level of Pre Primary Education is, characterized by fulfilling a double purpose: the socialization of the human being and the stimulation of the evolutionary processes. Socialization is understood as the process of incorporation, the behavior of people, norms that govern social coexistence and its transformation to meet individual needs and interests: patterns, norms, habits, attitudes and values that are acquired in interaction with others and others: solidarity, spirit of cooperation and respect. The purpose is that the boy and the girl recognize each other as beings with personal identity and as social subjects.

At this stage of life in which it is established the basis and foundations for all the subsequent development of human behavior as well as the existence of great reserves and possibilities that exist in it for the formation of various capacities, personal qualities and the initial establishment of character traits. Personality is also formed based on the plasticity of the infant brain. In addition, socialization and stimulation developed simultaneously allow the child to be prepared for life and for the acquisition of permanent learning.

It is important to note that the role that the teacher plays as a guide, counselor and "privileged interlocutor in this educational dialogue is considered of vital importance; he is the one who has to put into operation, in each school situation, a unitary and precise programming of activities and know the importance of their approaches in relation to the situation and attitude of each child." (Ma. M. Prieto, 1989: 114) (Ministerio de Educación Guatemala, 2008).

2.10.2 Areas

The curriculum of the level of pre primary education is organized in areas that respond to the structure of knowledge in the different stages of human development between the ages of 4 and 6 years 11 months of age. They constitute the basis for the generation of knowledge and consider multiculturalism and interculturality, equity and values as articulating axes. The development of learning skills, logical Mathematical, thinking, artistic expression, and physical education, the strengthening of communication skills and knowledge of and interaction with the social environment are included in the approach to them.

Table No. 1: tentative distribution of time in the classroom:

Areas	Percentage Weekly time
Learning Skills	40
Communication and language	30
Social and Natural Environment	Inter-area integration axis
Artistic expression	15
Physical education	15

(Ministerio de Educación Guatemala, 2008, pág. 43).

2.10.3 Methodological Guidelines

In the Pre Primary Level, the educational process is developed through physical, mental, social and emotional actions that promote the construction of new learning that contributes to the integral development of childhood. It uses the game as an essential element of the methodology, in addition to techniques and instruments where the boy and the girl are the protagonists.

Although there is no single method to work in the stages of this level, the overall method is outlined as the most appropriate for learning to be meaningful and active. The teacher proposes to the children's sequences of learning, small projects, didactic units, generative themes or learning corners that require the integration of contents of different types and from different areas. (Ministerio de Educación Guatemala, 2008, pág. 186).

2.10.4 Significant Learning

The significant learning is the result of a direct and immediate experience with the objects, the facts and the people and implies a direct and active action from the boy and the girl. It requires a deep knowledge from the teacher of the necessary methodological procedures that allow the conjugation, effective, of the orientation of the teaching process with the action of learning that children do for themselves. (Ministerio de Educación Guatemala, 2008, pág. 187).

2.10.5 The role of the adult in the meaningful learning

In order for the development of the capacity to generate new knowledge and to apply it in a given environment to be evident in the child, it is necessary that the teacher:

- Be a facilitator or guiding of the development; Its goal is to promote meaningful and active learning for boys and girls.
- Provide the necessary stimulation for the children to plan what they are going to do and how they are going to do it.
- Set the stage for the experiences by asking the relevant questions and suggestions.
- Allow the child to discover, by themselves, the essential relationships without imposing their ideas or conceptions.

The basis of meaningful and active learning is in the joint work of the teacher and the child who learns through a process in which, in a situated and active way, they carry out their own learning process. (Ministerio de Educación Guatemala, 2008, pág. 188).

2.10.6 Organization of Educational environment

An adequate organization of the environment, including spaces, material resources and time distribution, is fundamental for the achievement of educational intentions. The teacher must offer a varied and stimulating range of materials that provide multiple opportunities for manipulation in accordance with the cultural schemes of the People to which the child belongs. The selection, preparation and disposition of the material and its adaptation to the learning needs are essential elements in this stage.

2.10.7 Classroom setting

The new curricular approach raises the setting of the classroom, as a reinforcement of the learning and skills that are developed, so to set the classroom the teacher must:

- verify that all the material is contextualized, this means that it must respond to the characteristics of each community.
- Prepare a poster for each of the areas to reinforce the contents that you develop. To each area you can designate a color or identify it with its corresponding logo. (Ministerio de Educación Guatemala, 2008, pág. 189).

2.10.8 Atmosphere of the classroom

The atmosphere of the classroom it is a basic condition to guarantee the development and an environment of happiness for the minors, this is achieved through respect and care towards each of them, so it is necessary:

- make them feel that they are estimated
- make them see that their efforts are valued
- strengthen group relationships through shared tasks (Ministerio de Educación Guatemala, 2008, pág. 190).

2.11 Evaluation

According to the Merriam-Webster dictionary is “the act or result of evaluating” (The Merriam-Webster dictionary , 1997) in other words is to determine the value, quality, or significance.

2.11.1 Checklist

Checklists are formats created to perform repetitive activities, collect data in an orderly way and systematic manner. They are used to make systematic checks of activities or products, making sure that the person does not forget anything important. According to the Merriam-Webster dictionary checklist is also known as “a list of things to be checked or done” (The Merriam-Webster dictionary , 1997).

2.11.2 Observation

According to the Merriam-Webster dictionary it is “an act of recognizing and noting a fact or occurrence often involving measurement with instruments” (The Merriam-Webster dictionary , 1997) in other words, the objective of this is to develop an instrument to observe the behavior.

CHAPTER III

PROJECT PROFILE

3.1 General aspects of the project

3.1.1 Name of the Project

Booklet of Basic English for Kinder students with a didactic material kit to be used with the booklet.

3.1.2 Problem statement

Escuela Oficial de Párvulos No.5, República de Haití does not have a booklet of basic English and a didactic material for kindergarten level.

3.1.3 Location

Escuela Oficial de Párvulos No.5, República de Haití, 21 calle 14 – 62 zona 11, Granai & Towson II. Guatemala City, Guatemala.

3.1.4 Executing unit

The student Martha Lucia Rios Calderón from Licenciatura en Lingüística del Idioma Inglés developed a booklet of Basic English for students from kindergarten level and a didactic material kit. Besides, it was prepared worksheets, didactic material and lesson plans for the teachers to be able to teach English to these students.

3.1.5 Project type

It is a product for an educational service. This booklet of Basic English and a didactic material for kindergarten students and teachers, it is created with the intention to provide an English material that teachers can use along the school year. The product is a complete planning of the contents of the Basic English course and the related didactic material for it.

3.2 Project description

The booklet of Basic English and a didactic material kit for Spanish teachers and students from Kindergarten Level is divided in four units, each unit has a series of activities such as songs, worksheets, handcrafts and flashcards related with specific topics that will be taught in each unit according to the knowledge and understanding of students of five years of age.

In the first unit, students will be able to identify and recognize the classroom furniture, parts of the school, school supplies and also name and recognize the means of transportation.

In the second unit, students will Identify, recognize and name the colors, besides they will memorize and name geometric figures.

On the other hand, in the third unit, students will be able to identify and recognize the numbers from one to five, memorize, name vegetables and fruits, and also name the most common toys.

Finally, in the fourth unit, students will identify, recognize and name the parts of the body and also recognize and memorize the different types of animals such as domestic, farm, aquatic, and wild, reptiles and insects.

The instructions and main aspects of this Booklet of Basic English and a didactic material kit for Spanish teachers and student from kindergarten level is written in both languages English and Spanish with the main purpose that Spanish teachers will carry out the content of the lessons.

With this project students will be developing listening comprehension and oral production skills in English.

3.3 Project justification

Due to the demand of this new era, in which English is the universal language, involving English in schools is needed. This Booklet of Basic English and a didactic material kit for teachers and students from Kinder level will provide to the Spanish teachers the necessary material to involve students in the English field.

3.4 Project Objectives

3.4.1 General Objective

To provide a Booklet of Basic English for students from kindergarten level and a didactic material kit for teachers at Escuela Oficial de Párvulos No.5, República de Haití, Guatemala City, Guatemala to be able to teach English class.

3.4.2 Specific objectives

- a. To design a booklet of Basic English and a didactic material kit with lesson plans, worksheets to be used by Spanish teachers and students for kindergarten level.
- b. To design the lesson plans that will be implemented during the school year.
- c. To provide the didactic material kit needed to develop the English class.
- d. To provide a series of videos and songs related to the topics.
- e. To develop two workshop sessions for Spanish teachers from kindergarten level with instructions and guidelines that allow them to use the booklet and audiovisual material.

3.5 Goals

- a. To provide two four unit-booklets of Basic English for Spanish teachers who will develop the English class.
- b. To provide two sets of thirty-six lesson plans designed according to the contents in both languages Spanish and English.
- c. To provide eighty-three printable flashcards and fifty-seven printable worksheets including handcrafts and unit evaluations.
- d. To provide a USB flash drive which contains a series of videos and songs related to the topics.
- e. To develop two workshop sessions.

3.6 Beneficiaries

3.6.1 Direct beneficiaries

The direct beneficiaries will be the students and teachers from Escuela Oficial de Párvulos No.5, República de Haití of Guatemala.

3.6.2 Indirect beneficiaries

The indirect beneficiaries will be the community where the school is located, the principal of the institution and the parents of the students.

CHAPTER V

PROJECT EVALUATION

To evaluate each of the chapters that the project contains, a checklist which was used as an instrument, each of the checklists have 5 aspects to be analyzed to determine whether the settled time, instruments, human and material resources were suitable to achieve the established objectives in each of the chapters.

5.1 Diagnosis Evaluation

According to the evaluation performed using the checklist for this chapter, it was found out that most of the aspects were reached in the estimated time. The aspects included in the diagnosis plan showed to be the most appropriate to determine the lacks of the sponsored institution; therefore, the objectives were achieved successfully. The instruments that were used to obtain information and identify the lacks of the institution were effective. The invested resources were minimal and well distributed.

5.2 Theoretical Framework Evaluation

In this chapter are included concepts related to teaching English to preschooler students. These concepts were taken into account to design the booklet of Basic English. The invested time and resources were well administered.

5.3 Project Profile Evaluation

This chapter analyzed the contents of the CNB for the kindergarten level, then based on those contents a booklet and didactic kit were created according to the students' needs. The planning, the design of the worksheets, evaluations, handcrafts, flashcards and the selection of videos and songs took more than the settled time. The invested resources were high; however, the booklet was a very innovative tool, because it is easy to understand and to follow step by step to develop an English class.

5.4 Project Implementation Evaluation

The project implementation was a success, but its results are going to be verified until the end of the year. Even the results are not going to be verifying right at the moment it had a great acceptance among the Spanish teachers and students. This innovative tool will help students to get involved in the English language.

5.5 Final evaluation

A checklist was used to perform the final evaluation. The objectives were the base to measure if objectives were achieved. The evaluations for each chapter were gathered and with a checklist it was determined that all the activities and objectives for each chapter were successfully achieved, giving as a result the Booklet of Basic English for kindergarten students with a didactic material kit to be used with it.

CONCLUSIONS

1. The Booklet of Basic English for kindergarten students and a didactic material kit to be used with it, was provided to the teachers at Escuela Oficial de Párvulos No.5, República de Haití, Guatemala City, Guatemala in order to be able to teach English class.
2. The booklet of Basic English and a didactic material kit with lesson plans, worksheets to be used by teachers and students for kindergarten level were elaborated according to their needs.
3. The elaboration of lesson plans that will be implemented during the school year to carry out the English class were provided to the teachers of kindergarten level.
4. The didactic material kit which was composed by flashcards, worksheets, handcrafts and evaluation units were provided to carry out the lessons from English class.
5. A series of videos and songs related to the topics were provided to enrich the contents stated in the lesson plans.
6. Two workshop sessions for teachers from kindergarten level were developed in order to give them the instructions and guidelines that allow them to use the booklet and the didactic material kit correctly.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. The principal of Escuela Oficial de Párvulos No.5, República de Haití, Guatemala City, Guatemala should establish a plan to perform the implementation of the usage of the booklet and the didactic material kit.
2. The principal of Escuela Oficial de Párvulos No.5, República de Haití, Guatemala City, Guatemala should create a plan of evaluating the booklet and the didactic material kit and determine if it fulfills the needs of the school.
3. The principal of Escuela Oficial de Párvulos No.5, República de Haití, Guatemala City, Guatemala should take into account the opinion of the Spanish teachers of kindergarten level when the implementation of the Project takes place and should determine if the lesson plans can be improved or modified.
4. The didactic material kit provided to carry out the lessons from English class should be updated at the end of the school year by the teachers.
5. The teachers of kindergarten level should modify the series of videos and songs related to the topics provided to enrich the contents to suit their different teaching styles and to the students' needs.
6. The principal of Escuela Oficial de Párvulos No.5, República de Haití, Guatemala City, Guatemala should encourage teachers to acquire English vocabulary in order to carry out in a better way the booklet and the didactic material kit.

CONTINUITY PLAN

1.1 Identification

1.1.1 Sponsored School

Escuela Oficial de Párvulos No.5 República de Haití.

1.1.2 Location

21 calle 14 – 62 zona 11, Granai & Towson II. Guatemala City, Guatemala.

1.2 Project

Booklet of Basic English for kindergarten students with a didactic material kit to be used with it.

2.1 Contribution of the product

The most significant contribution of the creation of the Booklet of Basic English for kindergarten students with a didactic material kit to be used with it, is that students have the chance to acquire basic vocabulary in the English language and start to have knowledge in this language considered as one of the most spoken around the world, as it is stated on the book teaching English as foreign language “Of the 4,000 to 5,000 living languages, English is by far the most widely used.” (Brumfit, 2003) .

The elaboration of this booklet which is composed by four units, 87 flashcards, 36 lesson plans, 57 worksheets with handcrafts and a series of videos and songs contained in a USB flash drive which contributes to the exposure of the students to EFL development, this action will be very helpful as Douglas Brown exposes in his book teaching by principles “Popular tradition would have you believe that children are effortless second language learners and far superior to adult in their eventual success” (Brown, 2020, pág. 87).

The content of the booklet supports the development and improvement of the English learning since it was carefully designed and planned in order to be practical to use and easy to be carried out for any teacher who is not specialized in the English language.

3.1 Project implementation process

3.1.1 Methodology

In order to take the decision to create a booklet of Basic English was based on a diagnosis performed in the school. It showed that one of the greatest lack was the absence of English class in the CNB for kindergarten students.

After a careful analysis of the contents and guidelines of the CNB for kindergarten, the content of the booklet of basic English and the dosage of the topics were stated.

The Translation Method was used in order to design the booklet since teachers do not speak the target language.

3.1.2 Techniques

The techniques used in the implementation of the project were various, the first one is the documentary analysis, it was used to determine the content of the booklet. Another one was the observation; it was used to evaluate in the model class that was taught during the development of one of the workshops, the effectiveness of the booklet and the didactic kit, finally survey was used for the teachers, in order to evaluate the efficiency of the project.

3.1.3 Innovation

The innovation of the booklet of Basic English and a didactic material kit supplies the need of the students to be exposed to English language at an early age, as Jeremy Harper says in his book how to teach English “Language acquisition seems to be almost guaranteed for children up to about the age of six. They seem to be able to learn languages with incredible facility.” (Harmer, How to teach English, 2007, pág. 46).

Another innovative aspect is that with the booklet of Basic English and the didactic material kit to be used with it, the students of kindergarten will have their five senses stimulated since all the lessons have different activities which contribute to develop and acquire the knowledge of the new language.

The creation of this booklet has a great impact in the public sector since this is the first didactic material for teaching English in kindergarten level and this not only benefits the sponsored school but this material can be reproduced and taught for other educational institutions.

Another innovative aspect is that this booklet of Basic English and the didactic material kit to be used with it, is an instrument with which students and teachers may start loving the English language.

Finally, the methodology used in the design of the booklet is not based on the traditional one but it uses technology which helps students to be engaged and learn the language better.

3.1.4 Success and learned lessons

The implementation of the project made awareness that there was a lack in the public education field to update the CNB curriculum in kindergarten level in order to add the EFL class since this exposure is very important at this age.

The greatest accomplishment with this product is that it allowed the teachers to be able to apply the content of the booklet by performing model classes during the training workshops and to put into practice all the activities planned in the workshops.

The creation of the Booklet of Basic English for kindergarten students with a didactic material kit to be used with it, accomplished the needs of the students and teachers of the school consequently they get motivated and enthusiastic about to use of the booklet and the didactic material and even if this implies that they are going to teach an extra class.

Throughout the development of this project, another major accomplishment was that PSP student was able to share the acquired knowledge through the career to sow the seed of love for the English language and specially to help with the development of others.

4.1 Justification

A continuity plan is necessary to maintain the project development and to reduce the risks that could affect its process. The planning of future activities that involve the continued use of the Booklet of basic English for kindergarten students and the didactic material kit to be used with it means the stability of the project. This plan will be useful to provide the activities to achieve the objectives and goals stated in the project.

5.1 Objectives

5.1.1 General objective

To motivate Spanish teachers to be able to teach the English lessons to students of kindergarten level.

5.1.2 Specific objectives

- a) To suggest a list of activities that ensure the continuity of the project.
- b) To prepare teachers to be able to use the booklet of basic English.

6.1 Goals

- a) To propose six activities that will guarantee the continuity of the project.
- b) To have two workshops in order to prepare teachers to be able to use the booklet of Basic English.

DESCRIPTION OF THE BENEFICIARY INSTITUTION ACCORDING TO THE CONTEXTUAL AND INSTITUTIONAL ANALYSIS GUIDE

1.1 Community Sector

1.1.1 Geography

The Republic of Guatemala has an area of 108,889 km². It borders with Mexico, El Salvador, Honduras and Belize, as well as with the Caribbean and the Pacific Ocean. Guatemala is a country with a great bio-diversity in a small territory, with geo-morphological and climatic areas which vary markedly, with regions of considerable agro-ecological richness. Two thirds of the country is mountainous, and 34 per cent is covered by woodland. The average temperature is between 18 and 22° C. Guatemala is located in the Central-American Isthmus, a region with a high level of risk from natural phenomena, as well as being extremely vulnerable due to the poverty of the majority of the population. Guatemala is divided into 8 Regions, 22 Departments and 331 Municipalities. Guatemala City is located in the Metropolitan Region.

The country has a population of 11.3 million. There are 2.5 million inhabitants in the Metropolitan Region – 20 percent of the total. National population density is 104 inhabitants/km², climbing to 1,213 inhabitants/km² in the Metropolitan Region. In the second half of the 1990s, the population grew at a rate of 2.7 per cent, much higher than the average for Latin America and the Caribbean. (Cerezo, 2000)

1.1.2 Historical Background

Guatemala City was founded in 1776 to replace Antigua Guatemala, which had been virtually destroyed by an earthquake in 1773, as the capital of the captaincy general of Guatemala. After independence from Spain, it was declared in 1821, Guatemala City served successively as the capital of the province of Central America under the Mexican Empire of Agustín de Iturbide (1822–23), the Central American Federation (1823–33), the state; and, Finally, the independent Republic of Guatemala, distrust of the city in other areas of Central America and the prevalence of open fighting in the city's streets and public buildings was a factor in the demise of the federation and in the failure of subsequent attempts to revive it. When Quetzaltenango, which had become the capital of Guatemala in all but name, was destroyed by an earthquake in 1902, many of the leading families moved to Guatemala City.

The modern city was largely rebuilt after the disastrous earthquakes of 1917–18, which shook the city intermittently for six weeks. The characteristic appearance created by low, massive structures has been modified somewhat by the erection of steel and concrete multistoried hotels and office and apartment buildings of modern design. Elegant residential districts have grown up on the borders of the old city, particularly toward the south, and low-cost housing units have been constructed in various parts of the urban area. (Britannica, 2016)

1.1.3 Policies

1.1.3.1 Historical background of Political Constitution of the Republic of Guatemala

The Political Constitution of the Republic of Guatemala is the supreme regulation that governs the country, it is known as the Magna Carta, the Constitution regulates the rights and obligations of citizens, the integration of the state and the agreements that must be protected to all citizens within the territory of Guatemala. As time goes by, Guatemala has had a series of Constitutions that are adapted to the socio-political situation that the country is living, then a brief history of the Constitutions that have prevailed in Guatemala.

1.1.3.2 Bayona constitution (1808)

The first constitution that governed Guatemalan territory was the Constitution of Bayonne, established in 1808 by José Bonaparte, brother of Napoleón Bonaparte; he, governed Spain and all countries that belonged to the Spanish colony. At that time, Guatemala was called General Captaincy of Guatemala, the constitution had 146 articles which regulated certain individual rights, such as the inviolability of housing and the limitations of the freedom right, and legal detention. (Digesto constitucional, 2001, pág. 9).

1.1.3.3 Constitution of Cadíz (1812)

It was called the Political Constitution of the Spanish Monarchy; it was the first antecedent of a constitution for Guatemala. This project had 112 articles, additionally, a declaration of rights that were presented to the court of Cádiz, and it was promulgated on March 19, 1812. One of the most important factors that regulated this Constitution was the process of creating a law. (Digesto constitucional, 2001, pág. 33).

1.1.3.4 Constitutional bases (1823)

The constitutional bases were the first step for the creation of the first Constitution of Guatemala, since these bases were given after the independence of Spain in 1821. Even though at that time, part of the population wanted to create the federation of Central American countries. It was issued by means of a National Constituent Assembly on December 17, 1823 and it was approved on December 27 of the same year. In the Constitution of 1823, they established the Federated States of Central America. (Digesto constitucional, 2001, pág. 99).

1.1.3.5 Constitution of the Federal Republic of Central America (1824)

Almost a year after the constitutional bases, on November 22, 1824, the National Constituent Assembly approved the new Constitution of the Federal Republic of Central America. In this constitution, it was established the republican, representative and federal system, being the popular choice the cornerstone of this system. Likewise, the division of powers was established and freedom of worship was allowed again. (Digesto constitucional, 2001, pág. 109).

1.1.3.6 Constitution of the State of Guatemala (1825)

The State of Guatemala, by means of a State Assembly, was reunited on September 15, 1824 in Antigua Guatemala, and in order to complement the constitution of the Federal Republic of Central America, promulgated its own constitution which was approved on October 11, 1825. In this Magna Carta, Guatemala was recognized as a sovereign, independent and free country, despite being united to the other countries by the Federation. Among the fundamental rights that were recognized in this constitution, were, freedom of thought, freedom of action, right of petition, among others. (Digesto constitucional, 2001, pág. 143).

1.1.3.7 Constitutive Act of the Republic of Guatemala (1851)

This document was the first one created after the dissolution of the Central American Federation, such was the case that the dissolution was ratified in the aforementioned document. This act entered into force on October 19, 1851. A government ruled by a president was established, with a validity of 4 years and the possibility of re-election. (Digesto constitucional, 2001, pág. 231).

1.1.3.8 Constitutive Law of the Republic of Guatemala (1879)

After the Constitutive Act of the Republic of Guatemala was almost 20 years in force, the Constitutive Law of the Republic of Guatemala, was decreed on December 11, 1879. This Constituent Law had as its antecedent the revolution led by Justo Rufino Barrios. This Constitution had as its main elements that it was secular, concise and it had the right to personal exhibition. For the first time, the Constitution used the term guarantees to refer to the freedom of industry, freedom of speech, property and other inherent rights of Guatemalans. This constitution experienced several modifications and reforms, among which the period of 4 years to be President was introduced. (Digesto constitucional, 2001, pág. 245).

1.1.3.9 Constitution of the Federal Republic of Central America (1921)

As background of this Constitution, there was the failed attempt to recover the Central American Federation. The constitution never came into effect, despite it had been decreed, on September 9, 1921, by the representatives of Guatemala, Honduras, and El Salvador. Specifically, in the years 1927, 1935 and 1941 there were several reforms, among which, the idea of extending the presidential period was included. (Digesto constitucional, 2001, pág. 307).

1.1.3.10 Constitution of the Republic of Guatemala (1945)

In Guatemala, October 20, 1944 is a very important date because it is known as the day of the revolution, since this day General Jorge Ubico was overthrown. After this overthrow, on March 11, 1945, the New Constitution of the Republic of Guatemala was decreed, which had three important characteristics. The first characteristic was that public officials should be honest, the second one was that education should be improved through literacy and the third was that the correctional system should be improved. In this constitution, labor focus was emphasized, especially the fact that workdays were set, the minimum wage, the right to strike, the regulation of women's work, among others. (Digesto constitucional, 2001, pág. 447).

1.1.3.11 Constitution of the Republic of Guatemala (1956)

The constitution lasted 11 years, because on February 2, 1956, Carlos Castillo Armas as President of the Republic, decreed a new constitution. This constitution was influenced by two ratified agreements, in 1948, by Guatemala, the American Declaration of Rights and Duties of Man and Universal Declaration of Human Rights. Among the most important elements of the constitution of 1956 was the recognition of the legal entity of the church, the improvement of the legal regime of private universities and the processes of expropriation of the land are limited. (Digesto constitucional, 2001, pág. 507).

1.1.3.12 Constitution of the Republic of Guatemala (1965)

Manuel Ydígoras Fuentes was overthrown on March 31, 1963, by the Defense Minister. Coronel Enrique Peralta Azurdia. By virtue of this coup d'état, on September 15, 1965, the new Political Constitution of the Republic of Guatemala was decreed and approved, which entered into force on May 5, 1966. This magna carta contained 282 articles, among which stood out the creation of the Vice President position of the Republic, established again the presidential period of 4 years and not to be able to be re-elected which it is in force nowadays. (Digesto constitucional, 2001, pág. 573).

1.1.3.13 Constitution of the Republic of Guatemala (1985)

The constitution that currently rules Guatemala, has its origins in a coup d'état, held on March 23, 1982, in which a military meeting of government, led by General Efraín Ríos Montt, Horacio Maldonado Schaad and Coronel Francisco Luis Gordillo Martínez, who overthrew the president, Fernando Romeo Lucas García. It was promulgated on May 31, 1986 and entered into force on January 14, 1986. This constitution is divided into 2 parts, the first one is the dogmatic part that regulates individual and social rights and the second one is the organic part that regulates the State of Guatemala with its divisions of powers and international relations. (Digesto constitucional, 2001, pág. 659).
